SPRING MILLINERY.

We have already directed attention to the MILLINERY this season. It deserves more than passing notice, and we feel we cannot attempt to describe its many charms with its hope of adequately doing so.

The MATERIALS employed are principally Tulle, Apricot, Cream and Ceylon. COLORING which will predominate are all the varied shades in Venus Rose, Green, with Fawn and Blue. We note the absence of Brown for this season.

FLOWERS will be more than ever; indeed, the season is the season of flowers. They are so well composed of flowers. Feathers and Ribbons will also be well in demand. We wide trim and now in fashion afford good space for Flowers and feathers, and are in every way so pleasant as to demand the title of "CELESTIAL" bestowed by the fair admirers.

One of the sights of Sydney is "The Gardens," the seat of its kind is the MILLINERY DEPARTMENT at the MILLINERY.

LACE GOODS.

LACE as a trimming for this season holds a leading place. Paris Mode Corsettes, Mantles, Tea Gowns, and Chemises are trimmed with a profusion of lace, from the widest Chantilly to the narrowest Valenciennes. The lace is also used in the form of skirt, in the very narrowest applied in light and elegant head dress.

LACE in Gold and Embroidered Lace for Millinery is in great demand, and of all kinds we are now showing a splendid assortment.

stances which should tend to develop and maintain a right understanding instead.

It was natural that Rear-Admiral FAIRFAX, in addressing the representative gathering the other night, should find something to say about the defence of the Australian ports; and it was well that, even though the returning thanks as a guest, he had the courtesy to say what he thought as to our shortcomings and the courtesy to assume that words of warning or of criticism would be accepted as they were meant. But they were serious words nevertheless. The question of the defence was one which, "he regretted to say, New South Wales did not take up so heartily as she ought to do." In Fort Jackson, he said, "the fortifications of late years had received little or no attention, and over twenty breech-loading guns were lying here unmounted. Certainly it was a curious anomaly that, while all over the Empire fortifications were ready waiting for guns, in New South Wales alone guns were waiting for works in which to place them." In New Zealand had been done had been thoroughly well done." In Victoria, "under able Ministers of Defence, Port Phillip was fast becoming one of the best fortified places in the Empire." It is not satisfactory, when comparisons are being made and contrasts are being drawn, to find New South Wales, the oldest and richest colony of the Empire, the only one population, production, and trade, holding so poor a position in such a matter as this. One of the worst features of the case is that the explanation is not to be found in economy, or unwillingness to incur the necessary cost. Our tendencies are the other way; our habits are not parsimonious, but extravagant. What is said of New Zealand in the quotation that cannot be said of us. We have been distinguished not by thoroughness, but by the want of it; and the want of thoroughness in matters of this sort is a fatal evil. The efficiency attained in Port Phillip has been attained under able Ministers of Defence. It has been our misfortune for some time to lack the services of a Minister who had sufficient time or ability, or who took sufficient interest in the question to give it that persistent and practical attention which its importance demands. How can we expect thoroughness at any point without thoroughness at the head? And what hope is there of thoroughness when the responsible Minister talks about the tifying cost of restoring a disabled gun, and ignores the fact that it had been practically unfit for service for more than a year, and that no effective measures had been taken to make it fit for service, although the appliances were at hand? "When war came," said the ADMIRAL, "there would be no time given to erect batteries and to mount guns." We have been playing at preparations for war, and acting as though we did not believe that there was any real necessity for them. It is time that the play ceased and the work began. We have been assured that this necessity is now recognized, but at the same time comes an intimation that the facts of the case must be concealed from the public, because a variety of evil consequences would follow their publication.

Considering the state of public business and the desirableness of bringing to a close as soon as possible an unduly protracted session, the Legislative Council acted unreasonably last night in adjourning the debate on the Payment of Men-certainly came before the House under unusual circumstances, and it was only right that members should place on record the reasons which guided them in the course they proposed to take. It was also to be expected that the attacks made upon the Council in the Assembly would be replied to, and no fault can be themselves right with the country. But all that it was necessary to say could have been easily said in one evening. The question has been so thoroughly thrashed out that the bill might well have been dealt with in a business-like way. The time given to the consideration of such questions as the opinion of payment of members, the powers of the Council with regard to money bills, and the probable consequences of an attempt by the Government to coerce the non-representative branch of the Legislature, was time thrown away, for some of these subjects have anything to do with the existing situation. What the House has to decide is whether it will accept or reject the compromise offered by the Assembly, and one night's debate should have been ample for the purpose. Hitherto, the Council has been more noted for work than for talk; but if it does not mind what it's about its reputation for industry will decline until it stands no higher than that of the Assembly.

against the proceedings of last night. The members who addressed the House, while maintaining the rights of the Council, and speaking in plain terms of the aggressive attitude assumed by the Assembly in the earlier stages of the controversy, spoke with dignity and moderation, and showed a praiseworthy desire to deal with the measure in such a way as to serve the public interest. As everyone knows, the bill now before the Council was sent up by the Assembly as a compromise. It was submitted as such by the ATTORNEY-GENERAL last night, and as such it was accepted by leading members of the House. The concession made by the Assembly in depriving the measure of its retrospective effect is not a great one.

perhaps, but it was necessary to be remembered, in deference to the views of the Council, and it must therefore be regarded as a conciliatory step. Such is the light in which it is viewed by Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, Sir WILLIAM MANNING, and Dr. GARRAN, and although they confess that the bill is still objectionable, since it contains, so far as members of the Assembly, they do not see principle of self-payment, they do not see their way to carry resistance any further.

THE DOCK LABOURERS' STRIKE IN LONDON.

(BY CABLE.)
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, SEPT. 10.
The situation remains unchanged, neither side taking action to bring the strike to a conclusion.

Owing to the liberal contributions of money from the Australian colonies the funds available to the men's committee as strike pay are plentiful, and consequently the strikers are less disposed to give way to the dockmasters' compromise.

Sept. 11.
Cardinal Manning is trying to arrange that the proposed increased rate of pay to the dock labourers shall commence on November 1.

The steamer Gulf of Venice will complete her loading at Southampton.

The New Zealand Shipping Company intend to sue the dock companies for the detention of the steamer Ruapehu.

The Firemen and Sailors' Union will, in future, only permit refrigerator engineers to work on ships carrying New Zealand frozen meat on condition that the cargoes are kept intact until the strike is over.

(BY TELEGRAPH.)

MELBOURNE, WEDNESDAY.
The amount received in aid of the dock strike fund was £1,464 2s. The net total to date amounts to £12,747. The Chamber of Commerce subscription list has reached £200 4s. £250 was received from the Ballarat Trades and Labour Council. The existing London Branch of the Railway Department subscribed £200. Another instalment of £1000 will be called home to-morrow. The Chamber of Manufacturers called £50 last Saturday. The total gift of £10,000 in 10 days was the largest ever contributed to the colonies in the history; but this has been beaten by the contributions to the dock labourers' strike, which reached £12,747 in 12 days.

BRISBANE, WEDNESDAY.
The London strike fund now amounts to £1180. This includes contributions from several country towns. Other towns are sending contributions direct to England; £150 was to be sent from Charters Towers to-day.

The London dock strike was discussed at some length at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce to-day. A resolution was passed that the chamber should it be undesirable to express any opinion in regard to the proposal to subscribe funds to the relief of the London dock strikers.

BOWRAL, WEDNESDAY.
A public meeting convened by the Mayor, in response to a resolution to express sympathy with the dock labourers on strike in London, was held in the School of Arts last night, and adjourned till Saturday night.

ORANGE, WEDNESDAY.
A meeting was convened in the School of Arts last night, and adjourned till Saturday night.

SYDNEY, WEDNESDAY.
The members of the Australian dock labourers are bestirring themselves to raise subscriptions to assist the dock labourers. Appeals have been made as yet only by three or four dock labourers and station hands contributing. The union representative of Berrymore station forwarded to the dock secretary the sum of £100, which was received by the dock secretary at Berrymore station. The dock labourers at Berrymore station are £100 in the dock strike fund. It is expected that a large sum will be contributed from this source.

BYLSTONE, WEDNESDAY.
A public meeting of sympathy with the dock labourers on strike in London, was held in the hall of the Bylstone Hotel last night. Mr. S. O. Benson, J.P., was in the chair. Resolutions indicative of the object of the meeting were unanimously approved, and some pounds collected in the room, while lists for further subscriptions have been opened.

AGOGA, WEDNESDAY.
A public meeting was held in the council chambers this evening. A committee was appointed to collect subscriptions in aid of the English dock labourers. The Mayor presided. Lists of names of donors were read. Mr. Smith gave £10, and other subscriptions amounted to £15 10s. It was decided to hand the money to the dock labourers' committee at a meeting of the Early Closing Association last evening. It was decided to give £25 to the dock labourers in aid of the English dock labourers.

Mr. Houghton, the secretary to the Trades and Labour Council, informs us that yesterday the sum of £200 was collected by him on behalf of the Dock Labourers' Relief Fund, and that £500 will be added to London on Saturday.

Mr. W. H. Walker writes, pointing out that the dock labourers have fixed the rate for shoring in Victoria at 2s. 6d. per 100 shap than in free-trade New South Wales.

The following paragraph appeared in Tuesday's Argus:—The Minister of Public Instruction has decided that the Government will not be represented in the conference which Dr. Pearson has suggested with a view to selecting a uniform series of reading books for the colonies. Dr. Pearson is desirous that the books should be selected by a committee of English and Australian school teachers, but the Minister of Public Instruction in New South Wales points out that the system of education in that colony is not entirely similar, and that religious instruction is given in the schools. He considers that the proposed preliminary conference would have no practical result.

Comments upon the misunderstanding between the colonies on the Murray River question, the Argus says that if Sir Henry Parkes will submit any proposition for creating a federal conservancy board, charged with the task of improving the river, of impounding its waters, and of fairly distributing them, he will have the support of all judicious men. The Argus adds:—The existing arrangement is only temporary, and can be set aside and varied at any moment on the petition of either of the colonies. The bill for the improvement of the river, introduced by Mr. O'Donnell, is a mere Order in Council. If the one Legislature petitions then the other side is to receive six months' notice of the circumstances, and afterwards the Crown can consider the case, and can make such order as the Privy Council may recommend. Under this section, an Order in Council can at any day be issued giving Victoria the whole of the Murray, which we shall not ask for, or giving us equal jurisdiction with New South Wales, which is the application that would be made. The present arrangement was made when irrigation was unknown, and it would be shown that a practical inconvenience was arising from the situation, the Privy Council would exercise its powers, and would interfere before the quarrel had gone very far. It would not be passed by the Legislature, not by the Act of the colonial Parliament, but by the Act of the Privy Council, and the colonies would be in the hands of a headstrong child incapable of managing their own affairs.

The Household Bazaar and Village Fair will be opened at the Exhibition Building at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Special musical arrangements have been made, and among other entertainments there will be a concert and amateur dramatic performance each evening.

WEDDINGS.

"What can I give them?" is the question that puzzles all who have to give a wedding present. Last night we have long since solved this question: they make presents a specialty, and issue catalogues of appropriate gifts and china. Anything bought at Lanes' is a present, if duplicated by the same thing, and they are exchanged. Mr. Lanes' goods are of first-rate quality and cheap. (—ADV.)

representative House, the state of public feeling, and the consequences that would probably follow a conflict between the two branches of the Legislature, and matters to be considered and weighed; and, although, as Sir WILLIAM MANNING pointed out, if the Assembly had definitely and inalienably sent up the bill a second time in its original form, the Council would have been obliged, by the instinct of self-preservation, to make resistance. Now that the Assembly has given up one of the most objectionable features of the bill, the Council will do well if it accepts the compromise. It may be asked, indeed, whether what is left is worth quarrelling about? It would have been more seemly and more constitutional, perhaps, to defer the application of the measure until the next Parliament, but the Council has to consider the probable consequences of a conflict between the two Houses. How would the country be best served? By keeping rigidly to the position originally taken, or by making an original Parliamentary war, or by accepting the overture made by the Assembly, and so ensuring peace? Sir ALFRED STEPHEN says "Peace if possible." Even though an entire branch of the olive is not held out to the Council, he is willing, for the sake of the country and the harmonious working of the two Houses, to accept a single leaf. This was, perhaps, making too little of the concession, but, on the whole, Sir ALFRED STEPHEN stated the case very accurately and very fairly. The Assembly has conceded a point; it has shown a conciliatory spirit in adopting an amendment suggested by the Council, and it would not be to the advantage of the country that there should be any further conflict. Let us have peace.

Should the House adopt the reasonable compromise recommended by Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, Sir WILLIAM MANNING, and Dr. GARRAN, there will still be a question of some importance to decide. As we pointed out at the time, the bill now before the Council, owing to the hasty way in which Mr. RENN'S amendment of the second clause was made, does not carry out the intention of the Assembly. The object of the amendment was to deprive the bill of its retrospective effect, and accordingly the words "from the commencement of the present session" were struck out. But elsewhere in the clause provision is made for the payment of £200 a year "to every such member of this present Legislative Assembly now serving, and to every such member hereafter elected, from the time of his taking his seat." It is evident that in the case of a member returned at the general election "from the time of his taking his seat" would correspond in most cases with the first day of the session; and the clause, therefore, apparently gives members the "back pay" which they were supposed to have relinquished. The ATTORNEY-GENERAL takes a different view. There is no provision in the bill as to when it is to come into operation, and Mr. STEPHEN tends that the Acts Shortening Act would apply. It is provided in this Act that every bill shall take effect from the date on which the Governor gives his assent to it; and the ATTORNEY-GENERAL argues that as the Payment of Members Bill is in this position, no claim to "back pay" would lie. It was the opinion of Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, however, that if claims to "back pay" were made under the clause as it stands they could not be resisted, and it was submitted moreover that it was not right to leave the bill in such an unsatisfactory condition. As to the danger apprehended by the ATTORNEY-GENERAL that an amendment of any kind might lead to the loss of the bill, it was pointed out that the question of privilege could not arise in this case. The House of Commons offers no objection to amendments made by the Lords in money bills when the object of the alterations is to carry out the purpose of the Lower House, and it was maintained that the amendment contemplated in this view, but whether it is right or wrong, the bill, it is obvious, cannot be allowed to pass into law in its present unsatisfactory state. If the Assembly does not see its way to accept the necessary amendment which the Council will probably make, it must lay the measure aside, and send up another bill in proper form.

About six months ago some speculators in Victoria were proposing to purchase from the Government the exclusive right of advertising on the backs of postage stamps. If we remember right, a sum of £12,000 was offered for the possession of the privilege for three years. The proposal was rejected by the Government, and the colony has actually entered into a contract of this nature, and that the payment is to receive will be £3000 for the first year and £3500 for the second year, payable quarterly in advance. The arrangement is a curious illustration of the tendencies of the times. People sometimes wonder what we should now do without photographs. It is perhaps even more difficult to imagine the condition of the civilised world bereft of advertisements. It would be a howling wilderness instead of a garden of pleasure. Some have thought that it is possible to go too far in this direction, and that when they hear of the Pyramids of Egypt being decorated with trade puff, they are not altogether wrong. It would not be seemly to cover the front of our venerable Houses of Parliament with pictures of the shipwrecked lady who "washed herself ashore" with terebene soap, or with representations of that fair-haired boy who gazes with thoughtful eyes upon the changing colours of ascending bubbles. But, after all, there are attractions where advertisements may be seen without offence; and where can they be less offensive than on the back of a postage stamp, which as soon as it fulfils its purpose passes out of sight? It is a question whether advertising is not now becoming one of the exact sciences. The advances that have been made in the pursuit of it within the last half century have been amongst the marvels of the age. When one attorney takes up his abode in a small country town another soon follows, and business increases with the facilities for its transaction. So it is with advertising at the present day; so many are it that no one can afford to be out of it. It is, in fact, the very life of trade.

On the principle, no doubt, that one must go abroad to hear news, we have to refer to another colony for information on an important point of our own departmental administration. We are indebted from whom we published on Tuesday, and to the Melbourne Argus, instead of to the MINISTER for PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, for the news contained in a paragraph in another column, to the effect that this colony will not be represented at the Victorian MINISTER for EDUCATION on the subject of a uniform school-book system. Dr. PEARSON'S views on that matter were given in a telegram published yesterday. Speaking at Mornington, the other day, that gentleman said that the federal school-book he has in mind should contain all that was best in Australian thought and Australian progress in every department of life, and he instanced the bush ballads of Gosson, speeches of the late Right Hon. W. B. DALLEY, and biographies of such men as Mr. FRANCIS OSMOND, as examples of what he meant. The Conference is suggested to draw up a scheme for school-books on these lines, but, as the Argus informs us, the MINISTER who has charge of the schools of this colony has decided not to join in a movement of the kind proposed. The reason given is a good one. Our lesson books are radically different from those of Victoria, for instance, because the difference is an outgrowth of diversity in the systems themselves. Victorian education is entirely secular; ours is not, any more than it is entirely free, like that of Victoria. Scripture lessons are a part of our common school education, and a course of reading-books has been expressly provided for the purpose of inculcating them. Pupils in our Public schools are examined in Scripture, which is as much a part of the routine of study as geography or arithmetic. Of course that objection could get over by making the systems of education uniform. But would that be an advisable step to take? This desire for homogeneous systems has its disadvantages. Unity is one thing, but a flat level of uniformity is another. We have heard of State systems of education, of which it was the proud boast that departmental discipline had reached such a pitch of perfection that hundreds of thousands of children all over the country recited geographical facts or went through the same manual exercises with the uniformity and regularity of a machine. But what good? Surely it is better to develop individuality and give personal qualities a chance, than secure an unreasonable regularity that could be got much better from a collection of automatic puppets. The desire for uniformity is a dream, and like everything of the kind it has a tendency to run to ridiculous extremes.

An Australian correspondent of the Economist has written some things that are calculated to prejudice the colonies when they next go to the London money market. English capitalists are informed "that every colony can point to railway lines which no sane man would have expected to pay, and which were made in the teeth of professional opinion, to meet the exigencies of political life. No doubt the colonies need half statements to the other end of the world. Colonial railway construction and railway management may both be imperfect, but it is hardly necessary to proclaim the fact where it can do no good, and may do a great deal of harm, even though the information is coupled with the statement that most of the evils have been abolished by the appointment of non-political railway boards, which have had "a magical effect in improving the position both of Victoria and New South Wales." These, again, are unfavourable impressions which certainly are created by the fact that the loans, though incurred chiefly for railways, have also been issued for the development of the colonies in other ways, and the result has been that they have been used by successive Governments as bribes to the working classes, and with the object and intention, not so much of permanently benefiting the borrowing colony, as of temporarily raising the wages of the working classes." Now, though some few public works may have been carried out ostensibly to give employment to artisans, we may fairly challenge the statement that the object and intention was to temporarily raise the wages of the working classes. Necessarily under our system of government public works have to be carried out with loan funds. But that does not prove that the object is to raise wages, for the Government have undertaken public works when labour was scarce, and in consequence wages have been raised, it is not correct to say that the object was to raise them. We do not believe any political party in this or any other colony has had such a purpose in view. There may be public works which ought not to have been undertaken at the time they were; but the intention was to meet the clamour of constituencies, not to raise wages. If a large public building in Sydney is required by the Government, the fact that many masons are out of work is a good reason why it should be proceeded with. Some things that the correspondence of the Economist has written are certainly very misleading to our disadvantage, by those who have not a complete knowledge of the conditions of the colonies. Our Governments may now and then have made mistakes—what Governments have not—but the most of our public works have been wisely undertaken, and the bulk of the money we have borrowed has been spent to a good purpose.

The second reading of the amended Payment of Members Bill was moved by the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, and the bill was passed by the Legislative Council last evening. Mr. STEPHEN, whilst admitting the right of the Council to amend the bill, urged that they should adopt a conciliatory spirit and pass the measure in the form in which it had been sent to them. He feared that if any amendment were made in the measure it would not be accepted by the Assembly. Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, who followed, spoke in justification of the action the House had already taken in respect to the application of the principle of payment of members, and contended that given amendments of the bill would be necessary to give effect to the intentions of the other branch of the Legislature. Dr. GARRAN, Mr. SALMONS, Sir WILLIAM MANNING, and Mr. CHARLES also took part in the debate, which was adjourned till Tuesday next.

There were only four questions on the business paper of the Legislative Assembly yesterday. Sir Henry Parkes, in reply to a question in the name of Mr. CHANTER, said the Government would be prepared to supply a hand fire-pump for the protection of public buildings at Mosman, and it would be sent to its destination with the least possible delay. In reply to Mr. CRICK-BACK, who inquired respecting the mineral lease of a man named Clark, Mr. SYDNEY SMITH said Clark surrendered his lease on November 15, 1887. On September 5 in the same year Clark asked permission to surrender his lease with a view to obtaining a lease of the same land from the new lease, and there was no repugning. There were 49 mineral leases in the parish of Oliva, in respect to which rents amounting in the aggregate to £104, had been paid to the Crown, and steps were being taken towards enforcing payment. In reply to Mr. BARBOUR, Mr. BRUNER said complaints had been made of the loss of time to the public who go to select a piece of land (520 acres) and find that it has been withdrawn from sale only one day before the selecting day, and steps were being taken to give reasonable notice when forfeited conditional purchases were withdrawn from selection, except in rare instances. No general decision was arrived at in the case of Martin's forfeited conditional purchase. The portion reserved from sale pending legislation was the subject of a bill, and with a view to the land being made a special area. In reply to Mr. GORMLY, Mr. BRUNER said Mr. District Surveyor ORR recommended the reservation from sale of certain lots in the county of Cooper, parish of Williams, pending the completion of a survey of the land, now before Parliament. In view of the District Surveyor's report he saw no necessity for referring the matter to the Local Land Board.

Sir HENRY PARKES said he ought to inform the House that that morning telegram had reached his office regarding an almost unprecedented flood at Darlinghurst. He had applied for boats and sent them under the circumstances, as delay would cause from sending boats from Sydney, but at once asked the Government of Victoria to buy the boats in Melbourne and send them over. At a later stage Mr. LYNNE stated that he had received a telegram from Melbourne stating that the river Murray, which belongs to New South Wales, was overflowing upon Victorian territory, and asking this Government to remove them. Sir Henry Parkes said he was excessively obliged to the hon. member for the information, and he would lay the telegram before the House, and he would consider the propriety of laying on the table of the House the report of Mr. McKINNEY, in 1888, on the Murray River. Mr. GOSKIN, in reply to Mr. EDMONDS, said that he would be very glad to see the report of the Murray River Commission, which he had received, and he would lay it on the table of the House with regard to the Frotherbury's salary. The following motions were taken as formal, and agreed to:—Mr. J. P. ABRAHAM'S motion for copies of correspondence, &c., in reference to a road from Healdington to the Government of Victoria, received by his Excellency with reference to the report of the late prisoner Morrison, pending such prisoner's petition for leave to appeal for his Majesty in Council; WOL-BUYERS' DISPUTE.
EDITOR OF THE HERALD. of the case regarding the above, have been fully stated by any of you. I hope you will allow me space to state to the delivery charge which has been levied on selling brokers. Some years back this port was conducted on the old basis. The wool was stacked in the stores, and lotted for sale at auction; a few bales being reserved as samples. Owners were satisfied with the arrangement, and the prices paid were quite satisfactory. Now, if not better. With the new system, the wool is sold in the stores, and the brokers are charged with the delivery charge. This is a most unfair arrangement, and one which has caused much dissatisfaction. I hope you will give this matter your attention, and if possible, bring about a change in the system. Yours truly, [Signature] that would be sold by samples displayed, lighted from the roof, "as in was presently conceded, and the men put new roofs on their stores, and floors as well; and they had to take extra gangs of men, one gang sample sales from the bulk, to hoist these to the top of the stores for sale. Next, the men had to save them the extra wear and tear over the floor, all the greasy wool on the floor, all the greasy wool on the floor, all the greasy wool on the floor, so that each buyer could easily see the wool; and further, that the wool be shown apart from the wool themselves, "as in Melbourne."

Then it was requested that the required, at the expense of the buyers in Melbourne," and this, too, was an advantage of this, buyers frequently availing themselves of free purchases for days, and sometimes store space was most valuable. Endured this, not being sufficiently roachments of this sort; and prices came forward. Buyers required sales be always given in consequence, "as in Melbourne," to save time; and when the brokers had put the clerical assistance to do this, it added that the weights be made from the invoices, "as in Melbourne" might be detached and sent ments, one by one, and by this time a wool-selling business had been bent.—not in any way to benefit the convenience of the buyer and to the other requirement of the foreign merchant here, and that is, that the purchased stock when desired, be numbered and deliver them, stock them again, and keep them till the buyer's convenience to send them to the selling brokers, having first brought their system of doing so corresponding to Melbourne, and resolved to carry the similarity one charge the buyer for all the conveniences, "as is done in Melbourne." "A man, however, while willing that we everything tending to raise prices, when we copy Melbourne and facilities provided exclusively. "Make the squatter pay for it" to have yet to learn that all referred to have benefited the wool producer were quite as keen as they are now; and that the charges have been made to aid pay them. Especially is this well known that the eighth of a to buyers has in many cases formed buyer's calculations, and in his on the other side of the world, just &c.,
